VOCABULARY PHRASE USAGE

いろいろな〜 (iroiro na~)
This means "all different kinds of ~" or "all sorts of ~". In casual conversation, we often shorten this phrase to いろんな (iron'na).

でも (demo)
Demo means "but." Just as in conversational English, it can come at the beginning of a sentence to introduce a contrasting statement.

GRAMMAR

The Focus of This Lesson Is Asking Whether Someone Has Done Something Using Past-Tense Verbs.
ゲーム を かいましたか。
Gēmu o kaimashita ka.
"Did you buy a game?"

In this lesson, you'll learn how to ask whether someone did something using past-tense

-mashita verbs in questions. You'll also learn how to answer this question both positively and negatively, using positive past-tense (e.g., "I did go") and negative past-tense (e.g., "I didn't go") verbs.

"Did he go home?"

All you have to do to ask a question about someone's past actions is to take the past-tense sentence structure you learned in the previous lesson and add the "question mark" ka on the end!

Formation

[Person] wa [thing] o [verb-mashita] ka → "Did [person] [verb] [thing]?"

[Person] wa [place] ni [kimashita/ikimashita] ka → "Did [person] [come/go] to [place]?"

Answering this question is very easy. You simply say "yes" (はい, hai) and then repeat the -mashita verb.

For Example:

1.   A: きのう、かいものにいきましたか。
 Kinō, kaimono ni ikimashita ka.
 "Did you go shopping yesterday?"
 B: はい、いきました。
 Hai, ikimashita.
 "Yes, I did."

However, if you want to reply in the negative, you say "no" (いいえ, iie) and then use the past-tense negative verb.
  You remember we studied how to make a present-tense negative verb simply by changing -masu into -masen?

Well, to make this verb past tense, all you need to do is think of the -masen form then add the word deshita (でした) on the end. (Deshita is actually the past tense of desu.)

Formation

v-masen

For Example:

Meaning	Non-Past	Non-Past Negative	Past Negative

"to eat"	たべます tabemasu "eat"	たべません tabemasen "don't eat"	たべませんでした tabemasen deshita "didn't eat"
"to drink"	のみます nomimasu "drink"	のみません nomimasen "don't drink"	のみませんでした nomimasen deshita "didn't drink"
"to buy"	かいます kaimasu "buy"	かいません kaimasen "don't buy"	かいませんでした kaimasen deshita "didn't buy"
"to go"	いきます ikimasu "go"	いきません ikimasen "don't go"	いきませんでした ikimasen deshita "didn't go"
"to come"	きます kimasu "come"	きません kimasen "don't come"	きませんでした kimasen deshita "didn't come"

For Example：

1. A: あさごはんをたべましたか。
   Asagohan o tabemashita ka.
   "Did you eat breakfast?"

2. B: いいえ、たべませんでした、
   Iie, tabemasen deshita.
   "No, I didn't."

-Suru Verbs

There is another type of verb in Japanese apart from the ones we have studied so far, such as tabemasu and ikimasu. These are known as -suru verbs. These tend to be two-character words taken from Chinese with the Japanese word for "do," する (-suru), added on the end.

The polite form of suru is します (shimasu).

Here are the different forms of shimasu that we have learned using other verbs up until now:

Non-Past	Non-Past Negative	Past	Past Negative
shimasu	shimasen	shimashita	shimasen deshita

For Example:

Japanese	Romanization	"English"
べんきょう（を）します	benkyō (o) shimasu	"study"
ゲーム（を）します	gēmu (o) shimasu	"play games"
スポーツ（を）します	supōtsu (o) shimasu	"do sports"
かいもの（を）します	kaimono (o) shimasu	"go shopping"

As you can see from the brackets in the table above, the o/を that comes between the noun and shimasu is optional.

Sample Sentences

1. A: ともちゃんはパーティーにいきましたか。
   Tomo-chan wa pātī ni ikimashita ka.
   "Did Tomo go to the party?"

2. B: はい、いきました。
   Hai, ikimashita.
   "Yes, she did."

3. まいにち、わたしはべんきょうをします。
   Mainichi, watashi wa benkyō o shimasu.
   "I study every day."

4. パスタをたべましたが、サラダをたべませんでした。
   Pasuta o tabemashita ga, sarada o tabemasen deshita.
   "I ate the pasta, but I didn't eat the salad."

CULTURAL INSIGHT

What Is the Tokyo Game Show?

The famous "Tokyo Game Show," とうきょうゲームショー (Tōkyō Gēmu Shō) is a yearly video games expo/convention that is actually held in Chiba prefecture, just north of Tokyo. It usually runs for four days, with the first two days being for industry professionals (journalists, games company representatives, etc.) and the final two days open to the general public. You can try out the latest games from major companies such as Sony, Nintendo, and Sega as well as buy merchandise of your favorite characters. The event always attracts thousands of gamers, as well as many "cosplay," コスプレ(kosupure) or "costume play" devotees who dress up as game characters and have their photo taken by other fans.
